The bid proposal for the project was $133,147.23.

Discussion followed between the council and mayor

Five bids were received for the removal of river gravel, three contractors were interviewed

Councilman Wilcoxson voiced concerns that although the gravel is removed this year it will need to be repeated again in the near future and suggested that the town bring in a contractor with a mining permit to remove the gravel, in return the gravel would be his to do with as he wanted and removal would not be a cost to the town

Councilman Faust indicated it is a huge amount of money for the town to spend at a time when revenues are down

Following the discussion, Councilman Raymer made a motion to award the contract to remove the river gravel to Ready Oil Field Services. Councilman Faust seconded and the discussion continued

Randy Raymer provided a short history on past dredging operations that have been done in the river in the same areas.

Councilman Raymer asked if the gravel could then be used on the south end of Veteran's Island to reinforce that part of the island.

It was noted that the gravel cannot be sold or transferred to another property but can only be used by the state, county or for the town's uses such as bedding for water and sewer lines and screened for other town projects.

The question was called and the motion carried unanimously.

(Clerk's note: The following statement is a direct quote written and submitted by Sun Reporter Max Miller. Because Mr. Miller repeatedly made the following statement stating that he wanted his comments to be exact, and included in the minutes when published, he was asked to submit his statement in writing.)

Saratoga Sun reporter Max Miller said Council member Will Faust had had a conversation with Miller's boss, Keith McLendon. During the conversation, Faust complained about the way Miller had framed events at the Jan 3 council meeting. In the same conversation, Faust mentioned the amount of revenue given to the Sun by the town of Saratoga, and Miller asked Faust what his intentions were when he mentioned that sum.

Faust said the mention was not meant to be a threat and reiterated his opinion that Miller's coverage of the Jan. 3 council meeting was biased.

Miller replied, "That's a perfectly reasonable opinion to have, but if you intend to use public funds as a carrot and stick to influence my political coverage, I can promise you two things. One, it will not work, and two, the public will be made aware every time a threat is made."

No further comments were made.
